

NIGHTHAUNT

CURSED SHACKLEHORDE

This Spearhead army consists of the following units:

GENERAL

- ◆ Spirit Torment

UNITS

- ◆ 2 Chainghasts
- ◆ 5 Bladegheist Revenants
- ◆ 5 Bladegheist Revenants
- ◆ 5 Dreadscythe Harridans
- ◆ 5 Dreadscythe Harridans
- ◆ 2 Dreadblade Harrows

When the Nighthaunt mass for war, they coalesce around places of death, preceded by the reek of the grave and the wailing of the condemned. Upon sensing the living, they descend in a frenzied and fast-moving horde. Blades pass through their incorporeal forms and arrows fail to find purchase. Horror swiftly follows as the gheists close in, eager to swell their spectral ranks. Cursed Shackleshordes are despatched specifically for this purpose, impelled to capture souls to drag to the lightless gaols of the underworlds.

Shackleshordes are summoned around their Spirit Torment, a baleful entity who is attended by a pair of Chainghasts. Lingering on the periphery of battle, this unholy triumvirate empowers the horde before drifting in with chains and ghaftflails swinging. The brutal enforcers of the host are the Bladegheists, who slay their victims in frenzied gyres. Any who withstand their crazed rampages are dealt with by the shredding limbs of the Dreadscythe Harridans. The shrieking cries of these fell maidens shatter the resolve of any survivors, before the swift-moving Dreadblade Harrows sweep in on their ethereal steeds to seal the fate of those who would resist the dead.

'Do you hear it? The call of the grave? Heed the rattle of chains, the scrape of cold iron, and know it presages your demise.'

– Rathek Lasp, the Grimshackle Ghost

Cursed Shackleshordes are forces drenched in foreboding, spectral abductors who fall upon their enemies with merciless abandon, eager to drag them screaming into the depths of the underworlds.

The Spirit Torments are Nagash's spectral gaolers. Lords of the Great Oubliette, a continent-sized underworld honeycombed with freezing dungeons and pitch-black cells, they trammel the life force of the slain into the massive padlocks they bear.

Escape from these eldritch clasps is all but impossible – it is said they are even able to capture the disincorporating energies of Stormcast Eternals before they can return to the heavens.

Chainghasts are the servants and enforcers of the Great Oubliette. They are wrought from the soul-stuff of those who beseeched the gods to free them from imprisonment, whether it was justified or otherwise, but did not include Nagash in their entreaties. Their punishment was to retain a dim sliver of awareness, just enough to desire their liberty, yet be bound to obey and assist more powerful gheists in the capturing of souls.

To be trapped in the jaws of death is to find a frantic, animalistic strength. It is a wild energy born of primal fear, usually accompanied by tight-throated screaming that seeks to deny oblivion with every iota of the sufferer's soul. The beings known as Bladegheist Revenants are born of that terminal state; indeed, they are trapped in it, unable to escape those final moments.

Dreadscythe Harridans were healers and alms-givers in life. Upon their deaths, the Great Necromancer wrought a horrific transformation upon them, turning their hands into wicked scythe-blades that would instead lacerate and maim the flesh that they may once have sought to carefully stitch and soothed.

Dreadblade Harrows were once noble cavaliers in the service of an officer destined to become a Knight of Shrouds. They stood by whilst their master betrayed their office, their people, even life itself. Outriders and bodyguards for the monarchy of the dead, they have become the Knights of Regret, riding incorporeal on the winds of Shyish to slay, disincorporate and slay again without the slightest remorse.
